20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The Committee provides a valuable forum for a lively exchange of views on U.S. policy on important international law issues. During FY23, the Committee convened twice and produced spirited and open discussion among leading U.S. international law experts, thus providing the Acting Legal Adviser and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys useful observations concerning their analyses of current issues, providing alternative views, and flagging potential problems. In turn, these exchanges can provide Committee members – leading international lawyers – a better understanding of the Government's concerns and objectives. During FY 2023, the Committee considered various issues relating to international law. The Committee's discussions on these matters with the Legal Adviser and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys serve to enhance their legal advice to the Secretary of State and the Department of State.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

The Committee's membership is composed of (i) former Legal Advisers; (ii) members of the private bar; and (iii) law school faculty members and representatives of professional associations focused on international law. Members reflect a variety of political viewpoints. Committee members are leaders or active participants in national and influential bar associations or other professional societies. Their participation in the Committee allows the U.S. Government not only to ascertain the views of these organizations but also to ensure that United States Government positions are effectively disseminated to leading members of the U.S. international law community.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

The Committee generally meets twice a year. The Legal Adviser, Acting Legal Adviser, or Principal Deputy Legal Adviser calls meetings of the Committee to obtain the Committee's views in light of pending issues. During FY 2023, the committee met twice in a hybrid fashion with some in person and some virtual attendees. During FY 2024, there will likely be a continued need for the Committee's consultation on current issues.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The Committee's membership includes former State Department Legal Advisers and many of the nation's outstanding academics and practitioners in the field of public international law. Together, the Committee members constitute a unique reservoir of experience and expertise in international law and foreign policy. The exchanges among the Committee members – as well as between the members, the Legal Adviser, and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys – could not be duplicated; the openness and candor of members' advice, elicited during their interactions, is unparalleled. Moreover, the time and resources the Legal Adviser and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys save by soliciting such views through Committee meetings are considerable. The members are generous in giving their unremunerated time and advice to the Department through the Committee.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

N/A

21. Remarks

The Committee does not provide formal recommendations, and thus does not generate any reports. All members are recognized experts in international law. Meetings are held in order to give them an opportunity to comment and offer suggestions or insights to the Legal Adviser and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys on international legal challenges currently being addressed. Costs are incurred to plan and manage the meetings and prepare relevant background materials for members and attendees.

Narrative Description

The Committee provides a valuable forum for a lively exchange of views on U.S. policy on important international law issues. Committee meetings continue to produce spirited and open discussion among leading U.S. international law experts, giving the Legal Adviser and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys useful observations concerning their analyses of current issues, providing alternative views, and flagging potential problems. These exchanges also give Committee members – leading U.S. international lawyers – a much better understanding of the Government's concerns and objectives. Committee members thoughtfully discuss relevant issues, providing comments and insights that aid in structuring the U.S. analyses and approaches on current topics involving vital U.S. interests. The Committee's advice to the Legal Adviser and Office of the Legal Adviser attorneys enhances their legal advice to the Secretary of State and the Department of State and benefited U.S. policy on important legal issues. The Committee's membership comprises members of the private bar and private companies, as well as law school faculty members and representatives of professional associations. Members reflect a variety of political viewpoints. Committee members are leaders or active participants in national and influential bar associations or other professional societies. Their participation in the Committee allows the U.S. Government not only to ascertain the views of these organizations but also to ensure that U.S. Government positions are effectively disseminated to leading members of the U.S. international law community.
