20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The President's Export Council (PEC) provided advice and policy recommendations on exporting. Its primary function was to advise the President on export trade matters. The PEC advocated for export expansion and explores options for the improvement of trade relationships with the global trading partners of the United States.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

The Council membership consisted of up to 28 private sector members representing a range of sectors active in export trade, including small and large business, services, agriculture, capital goods, consumer goods, process industries, strategic industries, high-technology and basic industries, as well as labor. The diversity of the membership allowed the Council to provide the President with a consensus of views on trade from all segments of the economy. Additionally, Five United States Senators and five Members of the House of Representatives were appointed to the PEC by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, respectively. Seventeen Executive Branch members served by virtue of their office and include the Secretaries of Commerce, Agriculture, Energy, Homeland Security, Labor, State, Treasury, and Transportation; the United States Trade Representative; the Chairman of the Export-Import Bank of the United States; the Administrator of the U.S. Small Business Administration; the Director of the United States Trade and Development Agency; the President of the United States International Development Finance Corporation; the Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors; the Director of the Office of Management and Budget; the Director of the National Economic Council; and Director of the National Security Council. The heads, or their designees, of the National Governors Association and the United States Conference of Mayors were also members of the PEC.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

The Council generally met twice each year.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The President's Export Council was the only national advisory committee on export expansion and the only one that encouraged export expansion in the private sector. The Council also made recommendations on broad, national policies and programs affecting trade. Other trade-related committees existed with a narrower focus on trade negotiations, and most offered advice only on specific industry or sectoral matters. The Council was the only advisory committee on trade whose membership included all the major actors in the trade field: representatives from the Administration, the Congress, industry, agriculture, and labor. Therefore, it was the only forum that allowed for discussion and debate among these various factions prior to providing advice to the President. Because of the Council's unique membership, high-visibility, and access to policymakers, it was a more credible and effective advocacy group than other advisory groups. The companies represented also had considerable resources to do research and other work gratis. Hiring consultants to do this same work would have cost the Government considerably more.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

N/A

21. Remarks

Per Executive Order, Continuance of Certain Federal Advisory Committees, the President's Export Council was not renewed and terminated effective September 30, 2025.
