20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The Overseas Schools Advisory Council obtains information and counsel from business community partners in the United States. Twice a year they advise the Office of Overseas Schools of the Department of State concerning policy matters and necessary personnel and financial support to the overseas schools. Council members are encouraged to meet with members of the American business community and visit overseas schools. When possible, council members will meet with school board members to review the schools' needs. As a result, the number of U.S. business representatives on the overseas school boards has continues to rise. By way of this engagement, members of the council have prepared materials to assist and support schools on a variety of topics. The educational projects spearheaded by the Council are playing a significant role in the overseas schools' efforts to improve their staffs, enrich their curricula, and permit thousands of American children overseas to benefit from the newest educational materials and techniques. The Council began an initiative in FY 2011 that will be especially helpful to the Department of State to make the World Virtual School available to American overseas schools. This capability will assist the schools maintain instruction during emergencies that require school closures so that students continue their education without significant disruption. In 2015 the Council also proposed a Child Protection Project This is being done in cooperation with the Centre for Missing and Exploited Children. The Council received updates on the World Virtual School and Child Protection Projects at their recent meeting. In addition, the Council funded a Special Needs Project and committed $80,000.00 to its purposes. Special Education consultants will be made available to all regional education associations as well as individual schools. These consultants will provide guidance on how to build and staff an exemplary special needs program. In 2004 the Council began the process of placing as many of the funded projects on the Department of State's Internet and Intranet. Currently 22 of the Council's projects are available to schools, and other interested parties, electronically. The Council is currently sponsoring a project to address the social and emotional needs of students. Consultants are being identified and made available to our schools around the world.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

The committee seeks members of the business, foundation and education communities to serve as Representative members of their organizations on the council. These individuals are of diverse backgrounds, professional qualifications and work experience. They have a strong interest in helping Department-assisted overseas schools become centers of excellence in education and in helping to make service abroad more attractive to U. S. citizens with school aged children, both in the business community and the U. S. Government. In addition, the Council seeks to have a mix of Representative members from both the operating and human resources units of business organizations. Currently the Council has 16 representative members, plus one in the process of being approved. Of this number, five are women. These factors are not explicit balance factors but are highly desirable in achieving a diversity of viewpoints on the Council.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

The committee meets twice a calendar year. The council's winter meeting is held at the beginning of the year and consists of the full membership in attendance. The second meeting is held in the summer where the committee meets to discuss pending initiatives. To accommodate the demanding needs of the membership, the council offers a hybrid approach. The winter meeting focused on Child Protection, Special Needs, and Social/Emotional Needs, as well as fundraising and recruitment. The June meeting was an informal working session to further efforts to increase fundraising and membership. The council will hold the next meeting on February 5, 2025, in Washington, D.C.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The Overseas Schools Advisory Council is the longest, continually operating council within the Department. It is a public/private partnership between the Department and U. S. business and corporate Representatives. The Council's members have a unique insight into the challenges their employees encounter when accepting an overseas assignment. These individuals understand the issues confronted by their employees with school aged children when relocating to another country. The two meetings the Council holds each year provide the Department with insights that would not be possible without this body. We know of no other agency, group or committee, within the Department, that has such a vested interest in ensuring that the children attending an American overseas school receive the finest education possible.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

All Council meetings are open.

21. Remarks

Subcommittees: The Council does not have any subcommittees at this time. Previously, the Council has used an ad-hoc committee on fundraising. The Fundraising Committee has considered a variety of ways to improve the Council's fundraising efforts that support its Educational Assistance Program. Oral reports on all current projects are provided during regular Council meetings.

Narrative Description

The Council supports the Departments mission and Strategic Goal # 2 of the FY 2018-2024 State-U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) Strategic Plan: Modernize the Way we do Diplomacy and Development through enabling diplomats and development professionals to influence and operate more efficiently, effectively and collaboratively. This support is provided in several ways; at the two Council meetings held each year and on other occasions throughout the year. Members provide information and advice from the U. S. business community to assist the Office of Overseas Schools in assuring that the dependents of USG and U. S. corporate overseas employees have access to high quality educational opportunities abroad. Members obtain such information through consultations with their colleagues in the U. S. business community and through visits to overseas schools where they review the schools' needs and USG educational assistance programs. In addition, Council members provide recommendations to the Office of Overseas Schools regarding programs and activities that would be of benefit to the schools. Examples include encouraging expansion of Special Needs Education in overseas schools and increased Child Protection efforts in the schools. The Council also sponsors projects needed to enhance the educational programs of the 193 American overseas schools. The projects are developed in cooperation with the overseas regional school associations and funded by contributions from the Council firms and other U. S. corporations. These institutes have continued from 2005 through 2019 and now include science and social studies. Current priorities for the council include continuing to support existing projects while reevaluating priorities for the coming years. The primary beneficiaries of this training project are more than 138,000 children of U.S.-citizens.

Outcome Comments

The Council has achieved several significant program outcomes. In 2015 and 2016, the Council provided advice and suggestions to make the World Virtual School available to American overseas schools. This project, begun in FY 2011, will be especially helpful to the Department of State by making this capability available to assist the schools in continuing instruction during emergencies that require school closures. Thus, students can continue their education without significant disruption. Since 1983 the council has proposed and advised on 136 needed educational enhancement projects for the American overseas schools. These schools have a total enrollment of approximately 138,000 children of U.S.-citizens. The projects were developed in cooperation with the overseas regional schools' associations. Under the Council's guidelines, projects may take from one to three years to develop and complete, in addition, the guidelines require the schools' associations to contribute funds or in-kind services to development of the projects. The program has provided an array of videotapes, handbooks, study guides, student and teacher manuals, transparencies, computer software, lesson plans, and instructional packages. In FY 98 the Council funded the Emergency Procedures Manual for Overseas Schools Project. This project has been made available to all American overseas schools. Since that time the Council has funded four updates which include topics such as pandemics, terrorism and trauma. In FY 04 the Department of State approved the Council's proposal to begin placing their educational enhancement projects on the Department's Internet and Intranet web sites. The OSAC projects cover a variety of subjects that affect the educational programs of overseas schools including training of teachers, administrators, staff and school boards, developing and updating educational curriculum, developing programs for handicapped and gifted and talented students, and helping students develop leadership skills. In addition, OSAC has developed a number of projects, which support the use of educational technologies (computers, CD-ROM, multimedia and telecommunications) to assist these schools in preparing their students for the information age. Since the inception of the Educational Assistance Program, OSAC has made copies of these projects available without charge to international schools and to interested individuals. The Council's decision to post many of these projects on the Internet will make them even more widely available to schools in the U.S. and around the world, as well as to educators and the general public. At present, the first fifteen projects can be downloaded. Projects will continue to be posted on the site as soon as they have been technically readied for posting and downloading. In Fiscal Year 2004, the Council proposed a project to provide training in standards-based curriculum writing and assessment for American overseas schools. This project provides professional development for teachers in these schools to enable them to implement fully the academic standards in mathematics, science, English, and social studies, and the assessment methods developed in the Council's Project AERO (American Education Reaches Out), completed in 2003. The new training program supports the maintenance and delivery of an American, standards-based curriculum by addressing the need of teachers in American overseas schools for clear, common, and comprehensive standards to design curriculum, make instructional decisions, and evaluate students. The first institutes in curriculum and writing to the AERO standards in mathematics, English, and social studies were held for teachers in American-sponsored overseas schools in the summer of 2004. These institutes have continued from 2005 through 2019 and now include science and social studies. Current priorities include continuing to support existing projects while reevaluating priorities for the coming years. For FY24 OSAC is working towards enhancing existing initiatives aimed at supporting mental health, social emotional learning, special needs, as well as child protection. Currently committee members are working alongside the Office of Overseas Schools to identify key programs to supplement support of existing programs.
