20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The Consumer Advisory Committee (CAC) was established to provide specific recommendations to the FCC on issues specified by the Commission including matters of interest to consumers with in the Commission's jurisdiction. Issues include, but are not limited to, billing (cramming/slamming), robocalls, consumer disclosures, lifeline/linkup programs, outreach to underserved populations, access to and participation in the Commission's proceedings, products and services, and the impact of new and emerging technologies on consumers including underserved populations.

The Committee will evaluate the many demands that are placed on telecommunications, broadcast/cable, and other regulated services, and the impact of these services on the Commission's varied constituencies. Because many segments of the telecommunications and broadcast industries, consumer advocates, disability advocates, and regulators are represented in the Committee membership, CAC presents an ideal forum to address these issues.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

The Consumer Advisory Committee is comprised of representatives of both the private and public sectors, including non-profit consumer and disability advocacy organizations, regulators, and underserved populations, or, are Special Government Employees (SGEs) with expertise serving in their individual capacities. Members were selected to represent a broad and balanced viewpoint so that the many voices of the Commission's many constituencies can be heard.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

The Committee did not meet in FY2023. It is anticipated that the committee will meet approximately 3 times in FY2024.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The Federal Communications Commission does not always have the expertise and the resources to obtain and evaluate information from all sectors of the telecommunications and media arenas. As a Federal advisory committee, CAC presents an ideal forum to bring together in one setting the many different voices of these sectors. Also, because CAC has a broad and balanced membership, it frequently leads to a broad discussion of issues and needs rather than a discussion dominated by specific interests. Consequently, the FCC will benefit from CAC's recommendations that express a consensus position reflecting a diverse Committee membership.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

All meetings of the full Committee are open to the public and are broadcast whenever possible with captioning on the internet.

21. Remarks

The Committee was originally chartered in November of 2000 as the Consumer/Disability Telecommunications Advisory Committee (C/DTAC). Upon its re-chartering in November of 2002, the Committee changed its name to the Consumer Advisory Committee (CAC) to better reflect its scope and mission. The Committee was thereafter renewed biannually, most recently in October 2022. The CAC establishes subject-specific subcommittees or working groups as circumstances warrant. Working groups analyze issues specified by the FCC and make recommendations to the full Committee. From time to time, working groups may consult with FCC staff and/or other subject matter experts which helps to better inform recommendations to the full Committee, which upon deliberation, may recommend to the Commission. With respect to cost, the Commission supports plenary committee meetings plus many working group meetings during the fiscal year. In addition to FCC personnel salary and benefits, significant part of the cost relates to facilities/AV/internet broadcast, meeting transcripts, captioning, and other accessibility-related expenses such as production of meeting materials in Braille, sign language interpreters for people who are deaf, and computer assisted real-time translation for people who are hard of hearing. Other costs also include remote meeting platform services. Although the Committee did not meet in FY2023, time was spent in selecting and identifying appropriate topics for consideration by the committee and its working groups/subcommittees. Additional time was also necessary to review application materials for selection of potential committee members.

Narrative Description

The Consumer Advisory committee is chartered to provide advice to the FCC concerning matters within the jurisdiction of the Commission. Its recommendations are filed as comments in open proceedings before the Commission, are sometimes filed as ex parte communications if necessary, and are sent to all Commissioners. Recommendations are also submitted to relevant subject matter staff.
