20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The AC DDIR committee meets periodically to provide advice and recommendations on the offices and programs within the Office of Intramural Research and include (1) the Office of Intramural Training and Education (2) the Office of Animal Care and Use (3) the Office of Human Subjects Research Protections (4) the Office of NIH History and Museum, and (5) the Office of Technology Transfer. Advice provided may include specific accomplishments, overall strengths and weaknesses of a particular program, as well as recommendations. The committee may also consider the overall design, content, development and/or delivery of training programs to specific groups, as well as recommendations concerning program and policy development and resource allocation.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

The committee consists of up to 15 members, including the chair, appointed by the Director, NIH and the Deputy Director for Intramural Research will serve as a non-voting ex officio. Members and the chair are selected from outstanding leaders in private industry, academia, state governments, or other segments of the general public for their knowledge and expertise in health care governance and management; operational aspects of large academic health care centers; clinical research; and other areas of importance to the Office of Intramural Research. All non-Federal members, including the chair, will serve as Special Government Employees.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

Committee meetings are typically once per year. The committee met on February 2, 2023.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The Deputy Director for Intramural Research (DDIR) and other staff within the Office of Intramural Research require independent advice and recommendations to consider as OIR oversees and coordinates the intramural staff training programs managed by the Office of Intramural Training and Education, technology transfer programs managed by the Office of Technology Transfer, the programs managed its other three offices: the Office of Animal Care and Use, the Office of Human Subjects Research Protections, and the Office of NIH History and Museum, and possible future research activities in the IRP to be encouraged by the DDIR. Independent advice provides subject matter expertise from the US biomedical research community.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

NA

21. Remarks

Reports: The committee did not produce any public reports. DFO/Committee Decision Maker: Based on the assignment of responsibilities within the Office of Intramural Research, the roles of committee's designated federal officer and committee decision maker roles are held by the same individual. Members: Drs. Abel, Cuervo, Dietz, and McCullough were administratively extended. The number of actual members on the committee is lower than the authorized number of members due to the current workload of the committee. This committee conducts site visits and has been on hold while meetings were only being held virtually.

Narrative Description

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) is the nation's medical research agency—making important discoveries that improve health and save lives. NIH's mission is to seek fundamental knowledge about the nature and behavior of living systems and the application of that knowledge to enhance health, lengthen life, and reduce illness and disability. NIH works toward that mission by conducting research in its own laboratories, supporting the research of non-Federal scientists in universities, medical schools, hospitals, and research institutions throughout the country and abroad, helping in the training of research investigators, and fostering communication of medical and health sciences information. The Office of Intramural Research (OIR) is responsible for oversight and coordination of intramural research, training, and technology transfer conducted within the laboratories and clinics of the NIH. The purpose of the Advisory Committee to the Deputy Director for Intramural Research (ACDDIR) is to advise, consult with, and make recommendations to the Deputy Director for Intramural Research (DDIR), NIH, and other staff within the OIR with respect to intramural staff training programs managed by its Office of Intramural Training and Education, technology transfer programs managed by its Office of Technology Transfer, as well as the programs managed by the Office of Animal Care and Use, the Office of Human Subjects Research, and the Office of NIH History. ACDDIR may provide advice regarding specific accomplishments, overall strengths and weaknesses of a particular program, as well as recommendations for areas of possible scientific interest in the Intramural Research Program. In addition, ACDDIR may also consider the overall design, content, development and/or delivery of training programs to specific groups, as well as recommendations concerning program and policy development and resource allocation.
